

Problem Statement

College students have horrible spending habits, and are unable to efficiently budget for themselves.

Details:

Having bad spending habits is a detriment, especially for college students that either have no income or very little. It causes their bank accounts to be rather saddening, and quite frankly displeasing everytime they check it. A website that would take in the user's income and spending needs would be able to output a saving-friendly budget that the user could use as a guideline for free spending.
